'Promoting the Social Reintegration of Women After Release'

As part of the Global Webinar Series on Gender-Responsive Criminal Justice and Prison Reform

Wednesday
24th June

8am New York
2pm Vienna
7pm Bangkok

Investment in rehabilitation is one of the most effective ways of reducing recidivism for women in prison.

However, the programmes offered are usually limited and often gender blind, failing to take into account women's specific backgrounds and needs. Additionally, gender-responsive post-release services are often neglected, creating barriers to women's successful reintegration. This webinar will explore the existing landscape of support services available to women during and after release, using practical examples from different parts of the world.
